OVERVIEW

Jeremy Nickell is a transactions lawyer at Modrall Sperling concentrating on commercial real estate, energy development, and corporate transactions and lending. He also maintains a robust liquor-license practice, advising on purchases and sales, ownership and location transfers, compliance, and New Mexico Alcoholic Beverage Control proceedings.

Jeremy received his undergraduate degree from the University of New Mexico, graduating summa cum laude, and his J.D. from SMU Dedman School of Law, graduating magna cum laude. Prior to attending law school, Jeremy worked at Sandia National Labs as a financial analysis and international policy specialist.

While in law school, Jeremy served as the Air Law Symposium Managing Editor for the SMU Law Review Association. He gained valuable experience as a Judicial Intern for Judge Brenda Rhoades, United States Bankruptcy Judge for the Eastern District of Texas, and as an extern for the Federal Trade Commission's Southwest Regional office in Dallas.

When he is not practicing law, Jeremy enjoys playing golf, going to concerts, watching baseball, and traveling.
